

Boudreaux and Thibodeaux were sitting in Pierre's Bar across from the boat launch - an east wind is no good for fishing, but it's just fine for beer drinking.

Thibodeaux asked, "Boudreaux, do ya 'member back in da 80s when we worked at da refinery?"

Boudreaux replied, "Yeah, dem was good times. I work in da maintenance, and you work da security. I made a lotta money dere".

Thibodeaux continued, "Dem was good times fer sure. But Boudreaux I gotta ax ya sometin. Ever day we was dere, jus before quitin time, you pushed a wheelbarrow full a trash out da gate and to da dump. Ever day I checked it out, you had pieces of wood, hunks a rusted iron, pieces of wire, empty paint cans, dried out paint brushes, busted lights, all kinda stuff - but nothin worth stealing. Now, I know ya Boudreaux, I know ya was stealin sometin. What was it?"

Boudreaux chuckled and said, "Wheelbarrows".
