

On a dreary Thursday morning Boudreaux gave Thibodeaux's nephew Pierre a ride to town. Pierre came running out of the house with a laundry bag over his shoulder and climbed into the truck.

"Thank you Mr. Boudreaux, my car should be fixed by this afternoon", Pierre said.

"Dat's all right boy - glad ta help", Boudreaux said then asked, "What's with da bag? Yo mamma's washing machine broke?"

"No sir, the washing machine is just fine. Last Thursday I saw this most beautiful woman in the Laundromat. If she is there today I'm going to stop, wash some clothes, and get to know her", Pierre explained proudly.

"Pierre, dat's not such a good idea", Boudreaux warned.

"Oh, why not?", Pierre asked with disappointment in his voice.

Boudreaux explained, "Think about it Pierre. If dat woman can't even afford a washing machine, how da hell do you think she can afford ta support you?"
