

Boudreaux had been feeling bad for three days. Finally he paddled up the bayou to see Doc Robichaux.

"What's wrong Boudreaux?" Doc Robichaux asked.

"Don't know. I'm hoping you can tell me. I just feel bad all over," Boudreaux said.

Doc Robicheaux examined Boudreaux from head to foot - then he looked in his big medical book for a while - then he looked in Boudreauxs ears, down his throat and up his nose - then he looked in his book some more - then he listened to Boudreauxs chest and his back - then he went back to reading in the book.

Boudreaux was getting a little worried and asked, "What's wrong with me Doc?"

"I'm not sure Boudreaux. I'm having trouble pening it down. I think it's caused by drinking too much," Doc Robichaux said.

"You don't gotta say nothin more. I understand," Boudreaux said, "I know de problem myself. I'll just come back when you're sober."
