

Boudreaux got a job in Education, he was Custodian at a girls school. This was a nice easy job except for one task. The girls put on their lipstick in the bathroom and had a habit of pressing their lips to the mirror leaving lip prints all over. These took forever to get off each night.

Boudreaux brought up the problem to the school Principal.

"We've asked them to stop many times, but they just ignore us, it's a rebellion thing," the Principal said.

Boudreaux thought this over for a few minutes and said, "I think I can get 'em to stop if you can get 'em all in dere at 11 tomorrow morning."

"I don't know what you think you can do that my professional educators couldn't, but okay we'll give you a shot," the Principal said.

It was a tight squeeze but the Principal got all of the girls in the bathroom the next morning.

Boudreaux addressed the girls, "I wanta ax you not to put lip prints on da mirror no more. I figure dat if I showed you how much work it is to get dem off you would stop putting dem dere."

There was a round of giggles from the crowd. A stern look from the Principal got everything quiet again. Then Boudreaux pulled out a dirty rag, dipped it in the nearest toilet to get it wet, and started washing the lip prints from the mirror for the last time.
