

Boudreaux got a job piloting a crew boat through the Louisiana marsh. Boudreaux didn't know how it could get any better, he got to ride through the marsh all week checking out all of the best hunting, fishing, and trapping spots - and he got paid every Friday.

But when he got his second paycheck there was a problem - he went to see his boss about it.

"Dis check is short a hundred dollars," Boudreaux said.

"So it is," the boss said as he examined the check, "But it is interesting Boudreaux, last week when your check was over by one hundred dollars - you didn't say a word."

"Yeah, well, I don't mind a mistake ever now and den," Boudreaux explained, "But when it gets to be a habit, I think you oughta know 'bout it."
