

Being a traditional Louisiana Man, on the day they got back from the Honeymoon Boudreaux felt the need to "lay down the law" to his new bride Charmaine.

"Now listen up woman," Boudreaux said, "I'm de man here - I wear de pants - and I'm de boss of dis house. I'll go huntin, fishin, boozin, and card playin whenever I want - and I don't want no sass from you. I'll come home when I want, if I want - and I expect dinner on de table when I do. Dose are de rules - you got any problems with 'em?"

"Oh no Boudreaux, no problems, dats all fine with me," Charmaine replied, "But you need to understand dat dere's gonna be sex here at seven o'clock every night - whether you're here or not."
