

One morning back when Boudreaux was but a boy there was a big fight in the school yard. The teacher got everyone separated but none of the kids would say what happened to start the fight.

“Everybody sit down - nobody is going anywhere until someone tells me what happened,” the teacher announced.

After a quiet and sullen ten minutes Boudreaux raised his hand and asked, “Would you punish me for something I didn’t do?”

“Of course not Boudreaux. Do you have something to tell me?” the teacher asked.

“Dat’s good - cause ya see - I didn’t do my homework,” Boudreaux stated.
